Important information in case of a positive test result after a self-test

- You are obliged to have a PCR test carried out immediately by a doctor or a test centre.
- You must stay at home and isolate yourself until the result is available. Only leave your flat or house in case of medical or other emergencies.
- Your household members (family, shared apartment) shall reduce their contacts. If the PCR test confirms the infection (i.e. positive result), the regulations for positively tested persons apply, in particular the obligation to reporting to the public health department, 14 days' isolation from the testing date and immediate isolation of the members of your household. More information can be found in the General decree on the isolation of category I contacts, suspected persons and persons tested positive for coronavirus in your district or city.
- If the PCR test does not confirm the infection (i.e. negative result), the obligation to isolate yourself is immediately lifted. Also inform your household members.
